Tunisia: A Fintech Ecosystem Caught Between Cash and Code — The Fintech Times, 22 August 2026

TUNISIA

An analysis of why Tunisia has not become the North African fintech hub its educated workforce, established financial institutions, Startup Act, regulatory sandbox and geography would predict. The piece traces the gap to the persistence of cash rather than to any absence of policy instruments. Also under Digital Payments and Fintech and Access to services.

The hidden cost of South Africa's AI boom — Business Day, 22 August 2026

SOUTH AFRICA

South Africa's rapid data-centre expansion has come under scrutiny from the national human rights commission, with environmental groups warning about the power the country's artificial-intelligence ambitions will need. No terms of reference or reporting deadline for the inquiry have been published. Also under Data Storage, AI and Energy.

Fracture numerique : le Togo plaide pour l'open source et une nouvelle narration de l'Afrique — Republique Togolaise, 22 August 2026

TOGO

Togo's communications minister argued at a China-Africa media forum in Beijing that open-source technology offers the continent a route past language barriers to digital solutions fitted to local needs, framing the digital divide as a question of who writes the software rather than who owns the hardware. Also under Digital divides, China activities and AI.

3.5m missing births: how hospitals can close Nigeria birth registration gap — Vanguard, 22 August 2026

NIGERIA

An estimated 3.5 million children across seven southern Nigerian states hold no birth certificate, and the switch to identity-linked digital registration, with paper discontinued on 1 July 2026, has stalled at the health-facility layer: none of 371 targeted facilities is live despite completed training, with zero birth notifications recorded in the reporting year and 120,469 certificates issued against 443,162 registrations. Also under Registries and Access to services.

He started Bitoshi as a student with an $11.12 allowance. Now it has 60,000 users — TechCabal, 22 August 2026

NIGERIA

Bitoshi, a Nigerian crypto-payments startup, has reached roughly 60,000 users on a founder's account of building settlement rails around the Central Bank of Nigeria's February 2021 direction that banks and other financial institutions close the accounts of crypto businesses. Denied a bank rail, it paid naira out through an algorithmic queue that dispatched transfers across a pool of vendors, and moved to an automated payment-partner integration only after the CBN lifted the restriction in 2023. The founder puts users at about 100 in 2021 and 10,000 by 2023, and transaction volume at about $100,000 rising to some $5 million after that integration. Also under Innovation ecosystem.
